To Again Probe Shipping Board Administration

Congressional Investigation of Lasker Regime to Start Early in October

WASTE IS CHARGED

Charges Include Mismanagement And Lack of Decision in Management

BY A. O. HAYWARD
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—A new congressional investigation of the United States Shipping Board—of the administration of A. D. Lasker and the new board—will be undertaken by the House Appropriation Committee when it settles down during October and November to consider appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1922, it was learned today.

Disturbing reports have reacned members of Congress that waste and extravagance have not been checked by the new board, that there continues to exist lack of decision and mismanagement in the operation of the Shipping Board ships and that no attempt is being made to foster and encourage among independent American steamship lines enthusiasm for and loyalty to an American merchant marine.

It is stated that the Shipping Board has at work a force of some 40 expert accountants setting up a new system of accounting, drawing an average of $50 a day with no contract for completion of the work. It is charged that this force will be employed for sixty days, the total cost being run up to $120,000.

Other charges made against the new board are:

That under the plan of reorganization the Shipping Board forces have been made top heavy with high priced officials, shipping districts having been regrouped with a director, a newly created official at high salary, being placed over two or more district heads.

That divided responsibility among a large number of operating officials at Washington and in the shipping districts has resulted in costly delays and confusion in making allocations of ships, bad routing of ships, loss of return cargo, and disappointment to passengers.

That American operators have been encouraged or left free to use ships of foreign flags when shipping board ships werea available for allocation.

That a large number of high class American lawyers, not necessarily versed in maritime law, have been fees to handle shipping board litigation fes to handle shipping board litigation when the board has a highly paid general counsel and an expensive legal staff.

President And Party Now Aboard Mayflower

BY FRANK A. STETSON
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—President Harding and his vacation guests today boarded the yacht Mayflower at the Brooklyn navy yard and cruised thru the sound to a wharf near the Piping Rock Golf Club on Long Island where the president spent the morning at his favorite sport. He had as opponents Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey; Henry P. Fletcher, Under secretary of state, and Dr. Albert Ely, a friend of the New Jersey senator.

Some time today the president planned to return to the Mayflower and start to Washington on a leisurely cruise.

The president enjoyed a theatre party here and was greeted by many, though there were no large crowds as his visit was a surprise.

The president revealed he would be back in Washington by Friday but further than that he would not disclose his plans.

Bolivia Cast Aside The Monroe Doctrine

BY NEWTON C. PARKE
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

GENEVA, Sept. 13—Acting upon advices from the home government, the Bolivian delegation to the League of Nations Assembly meeting today issued a statement explaining the previous declaration that it did not recognize the Monroe Doctrine as extending to the present dispute with Chile.

"Bolivia does not consider the Monroe Doctrine as being incompatible with the powers conferred upon the League of Nations" said the Bolivian statement.

The Bolivian statement grew out of the controversy with Chile over the Tavna-Arica treaty of 1904 which Bolivia wants the league to revise. Chile contends that the League has no right to act and that intervention by the League might be construed as a violation of the Monroe Doctrine.

"Fatty" And The "Cooler"

Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle, who is being held pending further investigation for the death of Miss Virginia Rappe, motion picture actress. Miss Rappe is alleged to have died as the result of injuries received in a hotel suite in San Francisco, following a "booze" party. The above photograph was taken when the comedian was in Chicago during a hot spell.

Undue Influence Being Used In The Fatty Arbuckle Case

Charge Made By the District Attorney Springs Great Sensation.—"Pressure of a Sinister Character," He Says.

By ELLIS MARTIN
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13—Fresh sensation outrivaling even the shock of the announcement that Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, the champion heavyweight producer of the movies, had been charged with the murder of Miss Virginia Rappe, featured the developments of the case today.

Of first magnitude was the charge made by District Attorney Matthew Brady that "undue influence and pressure of a sinister character" has been brought to bear on the witnesses of the case. This charge was followed by the announcement that Alice Blake, one of the show girls who attended the party given by Arbuckle at which Miss Rappe was seized with the illness that resulted in death and the bringing of the murder charge against Arbuckle, has disappeared.

In addition, Brady declared that Zey Preyvon, another show girl, also in attendance at the party, had changed her story and faces possible arrest on a charge of perjury. The Preyvon girl was taken from the grand jury room to her room under guard of a detective. The district attorney said her arrest "depended on further developments." It was reported an investigation was under way to determine the source of a ticket to Alabama alleged to have been found in the Preyvon girl's possession.

The grand jury adjourned at an early hour this morning without action on the indictment against Arbuckle charging that it was sought by the district attorney. It was decided to give the prosecutor further time to present additional evidence.

The long session of the inquisitorial body beginning early last evening was replete with sensations. Arbuckle himself was called before the grand jury and refused to testify.

"We have sent Miss Preyvon home under surveillance," said District Attorney Brady. "The girl changed her story completely before the grand jury. Whether or not we shall arrest her and charge her with perjury will depend on further developments. I am convinced that undue influence and pressure of a sinister character has been brought to bear on her and other witnesses, one of whom, Alice Blake, has mysteriously disappeared from her home in Berkeley. We have been unable to find her.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13—Mrs. Bambine Maude Delmont, who swore to the complaint charging Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle with the murder of Miss Virginia Rappe, strikingly beautiful motion picture actress, loomed today as the central figure in the startling drama. Mrs. Delmont was to be the chief witness at the inquest which authorities were unabl to complete yesterday.

Early today it was declared that Mrs. Delmont might not be able to testify because of her almost hysterical condition. After swearing to the formal complaint against Arbuckle, she suffered a collapse, and it was reported that her nervous condition today was unfavorable.

Completion of the inquest and indictment of Arbuckle by the grand jury were expected to be the chief developments in the case today.

Mrs. Delmont is expected to tell the Coroner's ury her version of the fatal party at the St. Francis Hotel, where Miss Rappe is alleged to have been assaulted by the fate film comdian, sustaining injuries that resulted in her death, four days later. Mrs. Delmont was a member of the party and helped to care for Miss Rappe after she became ill.

Five physicians were the chief witnesses at the Coroner's inquest late yesterday. Dr. M. E. Rumwell, Dr. William Ophuis, Dr. J. Reed, Dr. Emmett Rexford and Dr. Olaf Klarbee, each of whom at one time or another attended Miss Rappe during her last illness, were the witnssses.

Much of the testimony given by the physicians was of an unprintable nature.

The line of questioning followed by officials dealt chiefly with the nature of the injuries that caused Miss Rappe's death with particular stress on the possibility of the injuries being of spontaneous origin.

Harry Boyle, assistant manager of the St. Francis Hotel, testified to finding Arbuckle carrying the body of Miss Rappe from his suit into another room. The actor, Boyle said, was wearing a dressing gown over his pajamas and Miss Rappe was nude to the waist. Boyle said he took Miss Rappe from Arbuckle's arms at the film comedian's request and carried her into another room.

Arbuckle plainly nervous and worn, was taken back to his cell in "Felon's Row" after the inquest and locked up for the night.

Health Board to Divert Drainage Polluting Creek

Will Connect Durkin Property With Sewers And File Lien

REPORT TYPHOID CASE

Utmost Precaution to be Taken to Prevent Disease Spreading

The presence of a case of typhoid fever in the borough and the fact that its origin has not been determined caused the Board of Health at its session last evening, to take exhaustive steps to clean up all possible sources of contagion or spread of the disease and to warn the people to use every precaution, lest the disease get a foothold. The typhoid case is on Jefferson avenue near Pond street.

The Board of Health has decided that it will recommend to Borough Council that the Durkin properties on Elm street, which drain into Adams' Hollow Creek, be connected with the borough sewer system and that a lien for the expense be filed against the properties.

The draining of these properties into the creek has long been a subject for debate at the board's meetings. The State Health Board is insistent that the pollution of the creek must stop and has again communicated with the Bristol health board.

Under the sewer ordinance, borough council has the authority to have sewer connections made and file liens for the expense.

The filthy condition of the alley running parallel with Trenton avenue and between Trenton avenue and Elm street was discussed at the meeting. This subject is to be taken up with the Department of Public Works today.

The alley in question is piled with refuse. Much of it is decayed garbage and it is in a similiar condition to that in which it was a year or so ago. Some of the residents in that section use it as a dump.

Asks Right to Run Trans-River Busses

Public Service Commission Hearing on Interdicted Line

MORRISVILLE - TRENTON

On Thursday determined efforts to bring about the resumption of bus service between Trenton and Washington Heights, Morrisville, will be made by C. B. Ellin, of Morrisville, proprietor of the busses, on September 15, when a hearing on his application for a certificate of public convenience will be held before the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania in room 496, City Hall, Philadelphia.

Operation of the bus service was discontinued about five months ago when Judge Ryan, in the Bucks county court of common pleas, at Doylestown, upon application of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Traction company, issued an injunction restraining Mr. Ellin from the continued operation of the busses.

The trolley company maintained that the service constituted an unwarranted interference with the profitable operation of its system and Judge Ryan held that the proprietor of the bus service was required under the law to secure authority from the Public Service Commission.

In support of his appeal for a certificate of public convenience, which will permit of the operation of the busses in Pennsylvania, Mr. Ellin, through his counsel, Gilkeson & James, of Bristol, and Isidore Stern, of Philadelphia, will present a petition signed by 1,500 residents of Morrisville and of Trenton.

Abandonment of the bus service has been attended by great inconvenience for many residents of both municipalities who had regularly availed themselves of it for transportation to and from Trenton and they are eager to have it resumed.

Guy Spiker Not To Take War Bride Back

BY H. K. REYNOLDS
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 13—Silent morose, sorrowful, with lines of pain in his boyish face, Guy S. Spiker, husband of Emily Knowles, for whom he made a home when she came from England nearly two years ago with the child of his brother in her arms, stands today in the wreck of his shattered war romance, vowing that he'll "never take back" the girl.

There is a vacant stare in Guy Spiker's eyes and he is bearing his suffering silently. His lips are sealed to all those who inquire as to the flight of his girl wife.

Only one thing is certain. Emily Knowles, mother of two-year-old Alfrd Spiker, will never live again as the wife of Guy Spiker. That much he has decided.

"I don't know what I'll do, but I'll never take her back" he declared today rubbing his hands together nervously. "I tried to make a happy home for her, but she's gone. Gone of her own free will, and my conscience is clear."

"Do you mean that you will divorce her?" he was asked.

"Guy has enough evidence for that" said Perley R. Spiker, who met the Knowles girl in England, and who is the father of her child.

"No", he told his brother. "I don't want anything said about that letter. If I would publish it, it would clear up everything, and show that I wasn't to blame. But I dont want to do that—yet."

The letter, it was explained, was written to Guy by his wife after she left him.

"Her confession is in that letter" Guy went on. "I could get a divorce with that, outside of the desertion, if I wantd to, and there are some other facts that I've picked up here and there."

He refused to be drawn out, however, as to the contents of his wife's "confession letter," or as to the

U. S. To Have Strong Argument At Conference

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—When the great powers of the world gather around the conference table here next November to discuss reduction of armament and measures to eliminate discord in the Far East, two all-powerful weapons will be in the hands of the American "Big Four" to lend driving force to American argument.

One of these is the $11,000,000,000 debt which the participating nations owe the United States. The other is the contemplated American tariff wall, which, if necessary, can be erected so high that it will keep away from American shores the products of nearly every country in the world.

Every nation participating in the conference, with the sole exception of Japan, is hugely indebted to the United States for money obtained during the war. Thus it some of the nations object to a limitation or reduction of armament the United States could, with perfect decorum, suggest that if the objectors have sufficient national resources to keep on arming they certainly have enough resources to take up long overdue obligations.

Great Britain, with the greatest navy in the world, owes the United States approximately $4,000,000,000.

France, with the greatest standing army in the world, owes the United States approximately $3,000,000,000.

Italy, with an army and navy of respectable proportions, owes the United States approximately $2,000,000,000.

With the exception of Great Britain, who has paid a little, on none of these debts have the interest payments been met and the amounts owed are steadily increasing.

Japan alone is not indebted to the United States, but industrial Japan particularly the silk magnates, contemplate with dread the enaction of a tariff program which would tend to restrict the importations to this country. The United States is Japan's greatest customer.

That the administration does not intend to relinquish either of these powerful persuaders before Nov. 11 became apparent today.

ENROLLMENT LAW NO JOKE

There seems to be an opinion widely prevalent among the less well informed electorate that a voter can change his party affiliation at will. Such is not the case and attempts to do so are contrary to the Party Enrollment Act of 1913.

Voters are not, however, herded into parties against their will. They have ample chance to designate their party preferences, but, having so designated, they cannot change around and switch from one party to another at their own sweet wills.

Before a primary election every voter has all the chance necessary to change his party affiliation, if he wants to. If he does not express a desire to change it, and does not appear before the registry assessors and inform them of his desire to be enrolled differently, he remains enrolled under the party he previously voted with.

There are voters in Bristol, for instance, who enrolled as Washington party voters and some as Democrats, who imagine that all they will have to do on primary day is to go to the polls and demand the Republican ballot and vote it. They will find that they cannot do this.

Those who are enrolled as Washington party voters will find themselves without votes, as that defunct party has no ticket or ballot at the coming primary elections.

BOSTON COMMONS BLOCK PARTY

Boston is regarded universally as the home of sedate conservatism and splendid caste and aristocracy. But it is, in fact, a city of emotional surprises. The unexpected always may be expected of Boston. The ceremonious auctioning of jobless men on the Commons was simply a dramatic episode. It was a theatrical exhibition. But three of the men who were put on the block obtained work, and they would have found employment by simpler, saner and more staid methods. Those who received money or food could have procured either without parading their misfortune to the curious throng. The severity of the distress and discontent resulting from unemployment is realized to the fullest extent by Washington and by the leading men of different cities. Washington will hold a conference next week to find means of abating the unemployment and need. In practically all of the larger cities movements are being organized to provide work or alleviate the need.

Eccentric, emotional disturbances, like the Boston auction of jobless men, can accomplish no good whatever, but they can aggravate class hatred and foster malcontent, rioting and crimes. Theatrical effects, with their irritation of bitter feeling against society and government, are the tactics of the trouble-making, discord-breeding faker. The problem will be solved by every community, and it will not be solved by sensational parades and demonstrations, but by calm, deliberate ad manly action.

BLOCKING THE UNITED STATES

The question of blockading the United States, raised by Lord Robert Cecil in the League of Nations assembly, is more perplexing than any raised by Edison. Lord Robert inquired whether, in case the United States supplied goods to a nation which the league had decided to blockade, the league should then blockade the United States. M. Schanzer, of Italy, chairman of the special disarmament commission, answered in the affirmative.

Were the League of Nations to attempt to blockade the United States, it would have to blockade the coast lines, as well as the ports, and the air besides. The question might be propounded to the disarmament conference as a lesson in the futility of war. How many navies and ships, how many men, and how much money would it take to close up the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coast lines? And would the blockade be made effective?

IRISH SETTLEMENT

So near are England and Ireland to friendly and just agreement that Americans who are interested keenly in permanent accord should bring their strongest influence to bear in favor of further conferences. Intimations from Ireland, though they are only rumors, signify that De Valera adheres firmly to his contention for a republic, while Arthur Griffiths, the Irish Foreign Minister, urges acceptance of the British invitation for frank and unrestricted discussion and is hopeful of an agreement which would satisfy the Irish people.

English official and popular opinion and sentiment plainly are desirous of an amicable adjustment of the Irish question, and Lloyd George's note, though it sets a time limit and affects a few stern phrases, throws the door for a settlement wide open. Irish official and popular opinion and sentiment appear to be identical with the British. The leading Irish papers no doubt portray the feeling in Ireland and their statements urge acceptance of the British invitation and express confidence as to the results of the next conference.

If there is any reluctance in the Irish Cabinet to dealing further with Great Britain, American supporters of the Irish cause should break it down. All indications point to the probability that an agreement can and would be reached with comparative ease and dispatch in another meeting. Should the Irish leaders not accept this opportunity for lasting peace and understanding, the judgment of the world would be against them.

JAPAN THE MAGNIFICENT

Youngest of the great nations, Japan would be as modern as the most progressive. Tokio notifies the peoples of the earth that Japan, in keeping with her political station, is forced to abandon the quaint, medieval structures occupied by the government and construct imposing state edifices of steel and concrete, faced with cut granite.

The first of the magnificent, modern buildings will be the Parliament House. This immense structure, to cost $11,500,000, will resemble the Capitol in Washington, and it will adorn a public park on the highest ground in the center of the Nipponese capital, near the Imperial Palace. It will have a frontage of 1128 feet and a width of 368 feet. The height of the wings will be 86 feet and the tower will rise 261 feet from the ground.

Japan displays her usual practical wisdom. A nation must not only be great, but look great. In fact, magnificent buildings and beautiful and impressive appearances are indications of national pride and public spirit. Being not only a modern country, but a wonderful country, Japan properly should portray its greatness in magnificent public buildings.

Pershing and Gompers had a tilt as to who won the war. Everybody helped to win it.

MAKE BOTH COME DOWN

BY MORRIS

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Communications, if properly signed, will be published under this heading. The names need not necessarily be for publication but are required as an evidence of good faith on the part of the writer.

Editor of the Courier:

On April 21st, 1921, the State Legislature enacted a law, making the public schools available for primaries and elections. This has not been generally published, and you are requested to make it known through your columns, so that your readers may do their part to make the law of practical benefit to state, city and township. This means also to the taxpayers.

This law authorizes the county commissioners to arrange with the directors of the various school districts for the aforesaid purpose; thus, at least, saving $15. in each district where, in the past, the elections were held in hotels or private houses. In the case of a single district, this is not much, but, in the aggregate throughout the state, it amounts to an enormous sum, taken from the pockets of the taxpayer in this indirect manner.

As the public schools belong to the taxpayers, the diversion of our elections to any private house or hotel is a clear evasion of this law; and dodging the law is the same as breaking it.

The Bucks county commissioners have refused a petition from the Community League of Warwick Township to have the coming primaries and elections held in their public school, which is located in the center of the township, and easily available to all voters, and have decided in favor of the Hartsville hotel, which is on the southwest edge of the township, and is only convenient to those living in that immediate vicinity.

The President of the United States is urging upon all the people the absolute necessity of economizing along all lines. The action of the aforesaid commissioners is in opposition to the law, and to the policy of the present federal administration.

The comparatively few votes in Pennsylvania country districts make it very easy for the number of officials in charge of the elections, and they suffer no inconvenience by having the elections in the public school; they are too near their home, and they are well paid from the taxpayers' money for what they do.

It is earnestly hoped that you will do your utmost to have this very desirable law carried into effect in all parts of the State where your influence extends.

Shall Pennsylvania Hold A Constitutional Convention?

Information for Voters in a Series of Questions and Answers Made Public by Bristol League of Women Voters.

Q—When was Pennsylvania's first constitution adopted?

A—Pennsylvania's first constitution was born out of the American Revolution in 1776 upon recommendation of the Continental Congress that each colony adopt the form of government best suited to its people and conditions.

Q—What two provisions of the constitution of 1776 caused dissatisfaction and aroused the people to secure through the General Assembly an act calling our second constitutional convention?

A—One was a provision making it difficult to make any change at all in the constitution. This was due to the fact that the Council of Censors composed of two representatives from each city and county was authorized to pass on such changs and a two-thirds vote was necessary. Owing to transportation and other obstacles, it proved virtually impossible to secure a two thirds agreement of this body.

Th other was the vesting of preponderant powers in the executive branch of the government, which consisted of a supreme executive council of twelve members, five constituting a quorum. The executive overshadowed the legislative branch.

Q—What features of the constitution adopted in 1790 represented important advances?

A—This constitution created our governorship, thus changing materially and simplifying the form of the executive branch of the state government. The form of the legislative branch was also changed by the addition of the Senate to the House of Representatives in recognition of the American system of checks and balances.

Q—What changes were made by our third constitutional convention in 1838?

A—The Governor's eligibility to succeed himself was reduced from three to two terms. This idea was inspired by the belief that it would be wise to prevent this official from building up political power, that the people should have more frequent opportunities of electing a Governor. The term of office in the Senate was also reduced from 4 to 3 years. This constitution was amended in 1850 providing for the first time for the general election of Judges by the people.

Sisters
by KATHLEEN NORRIS

An hour later Cherry, feeling as if she was not the same woman who waked in Red Creek this same morning and got Martin's eggs and coffee ready, crept into her father's room. Alix had warned her to be quiet, but at the sight of the majestic old gray head and the fine old hands clasped together on the sheet, her self-control forsook her entirely and she fell to her knees and began to cry again.

The nurse looked at her disapprovingly, but after all, it made little difference. Dr. Strickland roused only once again and that was many hours later. Cherry and Alix were still keeping their vigil; Cherry, worn out, had been dozing; the nurse was resting on a couch in the next room.

Suddenly both daughters were wide awake at the sound of the hoarse yet familiar voice. Alix fell on her knees and caught the cold and wandering hand.

"What is it, darling?" The old, half-joking maternal manner was all in earnest now.

"Peter?" he said thickly.

"Peter's in China, dear. You remember that Peter was to go around the world? You remember that, Dad?"

"No—" he said musingly. They thought he slept again, but he presently added: "Somewhere in Matthew—no, in Mark—Mark is the human one—Mark was as human as his Master—"

"Shall I read you from Mark?" Alix asked, as his voice sank again. A shabby old Bible always stood at her father's bedside; she reached for it, and making a desperate effort to steady her voice, began to read. The place was marked by an old letter, and opened at the chapter he seemed to desire, for as she read he seemed to be drinking in the words. Once they heard him whisper, "Wonderful!" Cherry got up on the bed and took the splendid dying head in her arms; the murky winter dawn crept in and the lamp burned sickly in the daylight. Hong could be heard stirring. Alix closed the book and extinguished the lamp. Cherry did not move.

"Charity!" the old man said presently, in a simple, childish tone. Later, with bursts of tears, in all the utter desolation of the days that followed, Cherry loved to remember that his last utterance was her name. But Alix knew, though she never said it, that it was to another Charity he spoke.

* * * * * * * *

Subdued, looking younger and thinner in their new black, the sisters came downstairs ten days later, for a business talk. Peter had been named as one executor; but Peter was far away, and it was a pleasant family friend, a kindly old surgeon of Dr. Strickland's own age, or near it, and the lawyer, George Sewall, the other executor, who told them about their affairs. Anne, as co-heiress, was present at this talk, with Justin sitting close beside her. Martin, too, who had come down for the funeral, was there.

The house went to the daughters; there were books and portraits for Anne, a box or two in storage for Anne, and Anne was mentioned in the only will as equally inheriting with Alexandra and Charity. For some legal reason that the lawyer and Dr. Younger made clear, Anne could not fully inherit, but her share would be only a trifle less than her cousins'.

Things had reached this point when Justin Little calmly and confidently claimed that Anne's share was to be based upon an old loan of Anne's father to his brother, a loan of three thousand dollars to float Lee Strickland's invention, with the understanding that Vincent Strickland be subsequently entitled to one-third of the returns. As the patent had been sold for nearly one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, one-third of it, with accumulative interest for ten years, of which no payment had ever been made Anne, was a large proportion of the entire estate, and the development of this claim, in Justin Little's assured, woodeny voice, caused every one to look grave.

The estate was not worth one hundred and fifty thousand dollars now, by any means; it had been reduced to little more than two-thirds of that sum, and Anne's bright concern that every one should be satisfied with what was right, and her ingenuous pleasure in Justin's cleverness in thinking of this possibility, were met with noticeable coldness.

If Anne was wrong, and the paper she held in her hand worthless, each girl would inherit a comfortable little fortune, but if Anne was right, Cherry and Alix would have only a few thousand dollars apiece, and the old home.

The business talk was over before any of them realized the enormity of Anne's contention, and Anne and Justin had departed. But both the old doctor and the lawyer agreed with Martin that it looked as if Anne was right, and when the family was alone again, and had had the time to digest the matter, they felt as if a thunderbolt had fallen across their lives.

5th Ward Defeated In 13-Inning Game

Mahan's All-Stars Won Out In a Hard Hitting Session

STORE BOYS' CLOUTING

In one of the hardest hitting games of the season, Mahan's All-Stars, with its "minor league" line-up of sluggers, defeated John Mulholland's Fifth Ward team. The game went thirteen innings and the score was 10-9.

Neal McDevitt started for the 5th warders, but lasted only one round. Avella then took the mound, but was unable to stop the onslaught of the sluggers and was replaced by Buck.

Ferry, who started for the store boys, was relieved in the 8th by Edward McFadden, who proved a puzzle to the warders for the rest of the game.

Features of the game were the hitting of J. McFadden and the twirling of E. McFadden.

DIAMOND DUST

Bridesburg plays North Phillies, at Harriman next Sunday.

What happened to that advertising agency team which was going to play a game at Harriman?

Season's near an end, and they'll soon turn the clock back. Then no more twilight games. Whoop 'er up, boys, while there's time.

Roper and Valentine were certainly there with the wagon tongue.

The Third Ward has its pennant lashed to the mast and dares anyone to try to lower it.

"Guy don't want to talk about the affair" Perley Spiker said when his brother again lapsed into moody silence. "But my wife and I—we would like to say a lot of things, and we would, too, if it wasn't that we had sworn not to talk about Emily going away until Guy tells us we can.

Mrs. Perley Spiker also stuck with insistent determination to the pledge made to hr brother in law that she would have nothing to say to the public about the wind up of the unprececented experiment which she embarked upon when she father of another woman's child, took the boy into her home, accepted him, and cared for him as if he were hr own.

THEATRES

New Colonial Theatre

Those who love gripping screen drama will be given a chance to witness an unusual portrayal tonight at the New Colonial Theatre, when the Stoll Film Corporation's much discussed photoplay, "Mr. Wu," with Matheson Lang, the original star in the title role, will be shown there.

The stage version of Mr. Wu has had a phenomenal run in England, Canada and the United States. It is one of the most discussed dramas of recent years, and Mr. Lang as the star has enjoyed wide encomiums. The Stoll picture version was directed by Maurice Elvey from a scenario by Frederick Blatchford. Mr. Elvey has successfully reproduced the atmosphere of the Far East.

In fact spectators are transported to China bag and baggage, as soon as the picture begins. It is a striking example of pictorial illusion. The settings are modeled exactly after those of the original gardens and the exterior scenes are delightful. The cast is a good one, including, aside from Mr. Lang, Meggie Albanesi, Teddy Arundel, Lillah McCarthy and Roy Royston.

Wu, the Chinese merchant and boss discovers his daughter's betrayal by Basil Gregory, the son of a white tea exporter. Wu has the young man thrown into jail and kills his own daughter, according to stern Chinese law. Then he seeks revenge by luring Mrs. Gregory, the young man's mother, to his estate. Her Chinese maid, suspecting Wu's design, supplies her poison for her tea. Wu discovers that he has been poisoned and with rapidly waning strength, tries to slay his guest with the game sword that struck down his daughter. He falls dead at her feet.

Forrest Theatre

Women have made sacrifices for their children ever since the beginning of the world, but never did a mother sacrifice more bravely than Aurora Lane, the appealing little mother in "The Broken Gate," produced by J. L. Frothingham and released through W. W. Hodkinson, which will be shown at the Forrest Theatre tonight.

Bessie Barriscale is the star of this beautiful story of mother love and never has she created a more tender and sympathetic character than this of the devoted mother who practised self-denial for twenty years for the sake of her nameless son.

"The Broken Gate" is adapted from the widely read novel of the same name by Emerson Hough, than whom there is no more popular and esteemed novelist today. It was directed by Paul Scardon, the man who made "Milestones," "Partners of the Night" and many other big successes.
